

ONCE UPON A TIME

THERE WAS A VOLCANO

RUSSELL ANDERSON

Once upon a time there was a volcano...

Once upon a time 3 million years ago there was a volcano called Konocti. Konocti was young then but was given her name first from humans some 10 thousand years ago. As humans often do (give names to things), these humans were new to life then and did not know that Konocti was part of a group or ancestry of volcanoes that moved from south to north along the world's Ring of Fire many years ago. Konocti was a descendent of these volcanoes that formed this Ring of fire in the great continent that was later called America.

Konocti was loved dearly by her mother yet like most volcanic mothers they disappear into the earth as they are beaten down by atmospheric water, wind, air, dust, rocks and water creating nutrient minerals that come from the center of the earth that they themselves are responsible for exhaling into the earth's atmosphere.

Konocti watched her mother die into the ground only 100 miles south of her just as her mother watched her mother disappear south of her. This was the nature of all volcanoes. As they then become only a mountain range with mostly a valley in their center called a caldera where there was once magma coming from deep out of the ground.

Konicti was raised to reach high into the sky, for it was the sky Konocti was raised to love the most: Like a teenager in search for romance; her love for life reached deep into what she saw as a vertical space above her as she learned to embrace all emptiness she could find.

It was this display of female meets male connection fulfilled at the time of eruption that authorized Konocti as an official grown up volcano 3 million years ago. This one eruption was the beginning of eruptions that led to the era of mankind that then brought great scholars to notice what was called 'the most fertile land in the world' on the map of history.

With the help of Konocti's ancestors who lived along the coastal mountains south of her, the water from within the earth fed into a large flood plain called the Central Valley or the Tigress Euphrates of the West meeting with the atmospheric water from the snowpack from the Sierra Mountains 150 miles away.

This gave way to a large lake between the two sets of mountains until a small part of mountains separating Konocti and her mother south of her gave way. This massive movement of land began the drainage of the large lake in the Central Valley and became the first connection of this type of land water to the vast ocean at the point we now call The San Francisco Bay.

The concave and convex action between the two waters became an enormous structure of natural art some called “the Bay of All Bays.” But it wasn’t only about this one piece of art covered by water Konocti and her ancestors were interested in; it was where the art actually came from. This was the vibration of the water or what is called today as ‘consciousness’ and human consciousness was the highest form of consciousness Konocti could hear.

It was 14,000 years ago when the first human tribe found the beaches of Konocti’s volcanic lake. (Now called Clear Lake in Northern California). Life during the ice age led this tribe from the south to the comfort and the healing of the warm volcanic springs feeding into the lake. The respect and love for the waters built a kinship between all nature and mankind in this early age.

The earth, the sky, the atmosphere, the sun and the water coming from deep into the earth were all united into one within Konocti and her eruptions of growth allowed all of these elements to spread within many hundreds of miles from her birth place.

The only difference then was that now (14,000 years ago) was that Konocti now realized the deepest reason for her birth. Her new found friends called humans brought great joy and purpose to her life and as this tribe of humans recognized that Konocti was alive and vibrant as well as provided their own wherewithal and safety, their friendship with Konocti became permanent.

Konocti recognized that it would take some time before the humans would find the vicinity of her decedents. They were part of the same ancient lineage of her past along the coast of all the western side of South and North America called the Ring of Fire (some called the San Andreas Fault) yet this fault from the point of Konocti's birth lead into the Pacific ocean where only the whales, the sharks, the dolphins, the tuna and the deep sea fish could explore at that time. This was when Konocti learned to take on the name "The Last of the Oldest See-able Volcanoes in America" even though she knew there were other volcanoes that could not be seen by the human eye.

Konocti knew that those humans who lived from generation after generation around her lake would be able to tell the most important part of the story to other humans. This story was not only that Konocti loved human kind; that love came within the earth and traveled though the earth's poles and into the empty space called the universe. The expression of this story in the way human history was explaining was very similar yet needed human experience to explain it to humans.

Like on the east coast of the Americas, where the range of mountains were once volcanoes that reached to the sky even higher than what is seen today of Mount Everest.

The springs of water coming from the deep earth generated water still comes up abundantly there. Konocti knew that this story of east meets west needed to be learned by humans to bring the continents together in spirit.

This could be established just by the understanding of vertical thought or the thankfulness of where all things came from rather than only what was on the surface of the earth or surface thought. It was only a simple lesson of cause and effect with Konocti because she knew if she could teach humans what she knew about the nutrients that came vertically from her volcano then they would use what was on the surface of the earth with respect and with that respect; surface thought would not be detrimental to humans next generations.

Konocti knew how important it was to these people that she would take on what they thought of her being the last of the oldest see-able volcanoes, when the most innovative of people would be able to explore deep into the earth as her water coming vertically from under the ground past the lower mantle of the earth. With a higher quantity of higher quality water able to come more freely from her sediment not yet covered up from hard clay and rocks, this water could then flow into the lake made by the caldera, then into the streams down the mountain and into the valley which led to the river that led to the Bay of All Bays.

This water would be more complex, more youthful and more healing than the water that had been going through the evaporation cycle of the earth's atmosphere. In evaporation there came rain that went into ground water aquifer and then back into the atmosphere again; this described the ancient writing of the upper firmaments. But it did not describe the story of the lower firmaments and how massive areas of land were moved by this new earth generated water showing how the continents fit together at one time. Before there was atmospheric water on the surface of the earth there was only newly earth generated water within the earth.

Yet the greatest of miracles of all was how the lower firmament water could heal the upper firmament water if and when it became abused, sick or polluted. So, if this is true then what has happened to the world since the industrial revolution? Why do we hear about these miracles happening in different parts of the world and not others? Maybe if we can just spend a little more time to listen to the rest of this story, we will find an answer.....

It is believed that the Native Americans who lived on Lake Konocti within those 14 thousand years understood this and it would be silly to think that water only came from the sky (atmosphere) knowing the healing quality of water coming from this volcano. This important feature of how the earth works is the most empowering to those who ask the question because knowing of the love of the earth goes beyond only knowing it is round. This knowledge was conveyed gradually to mankind some 14 thousand years ago on the banks of Lake Konocti.

We know what has happened in America some 240 years ago. The message was 'equality' to that nation as written in a document called "The Declaration of Independence."

The true shift of change in Europe began with the brave men and women who traveled across the ocean to get away from over 2000 years of oppression where the word "Freedom" was not understood. The deepest set up for freedom came when the forefathers of those Europeans met up with the forefathers of the Native Americans on the Coastal Mountains of America. In the meetings with Benjamin Franklin and John Hancock and the elders of the iuriqua Indians began the inner cry on independence; ‘all men (and women) are created equal.’

Though the constitution of the United States is still on record as being, for a country, the most powerful document on earth, it was only about 7 years after the document was written that the equality rule began falling apart from the newly persecution of the very souls the constitution was based on.

How could these people make a mistake in recognizing a universal law of cause and effect? What was it that they would repeat the same persecution on the Native Americans as what has been on them in Europe?

It was another 100 years later before the next generation of Europeans met up with the Native Americans on the West Coast of America at the shores of Konocti’s lake and the elders of that tribe recognized there was something wrong. From living so long so close to a large body of water coming directly from the center of the earth, it didn’t seem reasonable to hear from the white man that all of their interest was what was compiled from the resources of the surface of the earth. It wasn’t right for anyone not to honor where the recourses from. This thought was noted to be a form of insanity to the tribe.

Did the white man not learn their lesson from the generation before them who gained their independence from the word 'equality' given to them from people living on the east coast of America for thousands of years? Was that a home where the mountains were once volcanic and taller then any other known mountains in the world; a mountain range some mystics in the world considered part of a place called Atlantis where the mountains after millions of years have feed its people water from deep in the earth in exchange for giving wisdom of the land to people of the world? Was there then a purpose in giving that wisdom over to their bother 'the white man?'

It was now Konocti's greatest hope that this message is transferred over to the white people 100 years after the declaration of independence was signed at the shores of Konocti lake. These white people were not the same white people who came by ships from the European nations searching for resources like the Russians and the Spaniards. These were those white people who lived in the mountain range 3000 miles east of Konocti. They were the white peoples whose parents fought for their independence from those European nations whose only purpose was to exploit the earth.

This great white hope of Konocti's was felt deep into the earth and was long awaited to be delivered as a result of this message as was written in ancient writings that paralleled the same story of the restoration of the two brothers; Cane and Able. The meeting with the Constitutional Europeans and the Natives living on Konocti's lake now again put into action the true story of equality in a country now capable of delivering this message to the world.

This would then be easy to see that both sides of the coastal mountains (east and west coasts) of America were old and wise mountains. The one difference in the western coastal mountain range was the existence of Konocti. Konocti was the last of the oldest, seeable to the human eye, volcano in a country of equality.

It was obvious to the natives at Konocti's large volcanic caldera turned into lake that the water that lived in the lake was water coming from deep in the earth. This was the water that had greater properties of healing than the water that was already on the earth's surface for thousands of years. This was the new youthful water of greater energy, of complex structure and was not yet gone through the atmospheric cycle.

This was obvious to Konocti and the natives who lived on Konocti's lake whose ancestors lived from generation to generation on this lake but it wasn't quite obvious to the white people who have only visited for the last few years at that time.

Because Konocti had lived her life during the same time of the existence of the human race, she knew how important her ancestors felt she needed to get across this point to the white people who visited her lake. It was this she called "the Great White Hope" that was felt deep into the earth as if the earth was awaiting to be delivered the result of this message as it was written in ancient writings that paralleled the same stories in restoring the Cane and Able story written to humans.

This was the greatest of opportunity and honor for Konocti in her lifetime. It was her mission to put into action what her ancestors lived for. This thought would now be easier to teach the white people who come to the East Coast Mountains with springs of smaller degree a generation earlier. Because the West Coast Mountains were younger and Konocti was the oldest of all the see-able volcano's, it would then be easier to show the great cerebral minds of the white people who needed this type of thought in order to live in peace with those natives along her lake.

With Konocti's caldera still open to the core of the earth and the abundance of healing water flowing freely into this caldera forming a lake and out of that lake into streams then into rivers and into the Bay of all Bays, Konocti stood a good chance of representing all the other volcanoes, turned into mountains, before her. During her lifetime and the beginning of the lifetime of mankind, these volcanoes before her had smaller amounts of this type of water coming through to the surface of the earth through springs. Because Konocti still had a see-able caldera it would be now obvious to those with born of a greater use of the left side of their brains to join with those with greater use of the right side of their brains.

Konocti then was so confident that she could break the spell put upon the white people for thousands of years. To Konocti East and West had come together in a new born country that could eco this message to the rest for the rest of the world.

She was right. It is true that this message was delivered and it is true that this form of thought has already changed the world. But something happened, according to historians, had postponed or slowed down the process of the braking of this spell. With Konocti living for millions of years and humans living for only tens of years it is now known that this story is not over. Please listen to the second part of this story. It may be the key to Konocti's heart that you hear what she has to say in the last years of her see-able life.

Clear Water Vision

Many years before Konocti's birth there were known to be many other volcanoes on earth forming the different layers of the earth preparing for the coming of Konocti's ancestors and Konocti. These formations made by these volcanoes were created for other reasons of which Konocti knew were to prepare for coming of mankind. It made sense to Konocti as she delivered the minerals and elements over the land through her eruptions. These eruptions told her that in the layers below her there were other volcanoes that made it possible for her to release these minerals and metals to the surface of the earth. Without these minerals and elements mankind could not survive.

The same activity within the earth was duplicated within man so he and she could see how closely related they are to the earth. As there was movement with these volcanoes there then activated the ethers from space to travel to the earth's poles and converts this ether to the substance humans see as water. As more activity arose the ether then turned to water then pushed apart the lands to create oceans. The salts within the earth mixed with this water to create electricity similar to humans need for the neurons in their systems. Powerful energies were created within the earth that became radio active that gave more life to the earth and the space outside of the earth. This one action was the most important lesson Konocti knew she needed to teach the humans and especially the white people for reasons there was danger for all people if they did not learn this lesson.

The reason it was important for Konocti to express that intuitive thought comes before cerebral thought is because everything begins from within. This was originally the goal of all that is moral to humans and is also the same goal within the earth. It has always been proven that instinct is the motivating thought behind any truth and without instinct knowledge can not be true and truth can not be knowledgeable. Without knowing instinct or cause or where things came from; life to anyone would only mean he or she is scratching the surface and in terms of explaining Konocti's earth and universe; scratching the surface is what the white man has been doing for thousands of years. What is on the surface of the earth is a very small part of what the earth and universe is made of and fighting over it, knowing there is so much more then what is on the earths surface is only considered foolish or in some cases, a form of insanity.

This instinct was life to Konocti and to the natives that lived around her lake, but it was not yet the case with the constitutional Europeans visiting her lake. The visit was cordial and like the visit the Europeans before them with the natives on the east coast, for many years of their visit with Konicti it was inspiring and even liberating as they remembered the stories of their parents in how they had physically fought against their own kind from England for freedom. The stay with Konocti assured these Europeans that they have found new found friends and even brothers and sisters in their relationship with those whose ancestors have live for 14,000 years on Konocti Lake.

In order to explain what happened next it was clear that there was need to examine the reason it has taken so long to bring eastern and western thought together. Without looking at the cause the effect will always be the same. To do this, it was known to Konicti that history and geology had, like Cane and Able, to come together.

In the movement of the volcanoes from south to north along the Ring of Fire before the birth of Konocti the volcanoes were given a purpose to carve a barrier for the existence of plant and animal life. This barrier of volcanoes brought a distinct difference between the ocean waters and the lands that continued to establish and refine the atmosphere told to be a combination of oxygen and nitrogen perfectly designed as air for creatures on the earth's surface to breathe. This formula brought even newer life to the surface of the lands and in the seas. With every volcanic movement from these volcanoes there was an urge within the elements that lie deeper within the earth to push upward to the surface of the earth. These elements mixed with the oxygen and nitrogen in the atmosphere creating a deeper exchange of vibration on the surface of the earth.

When Konocti appeared at the seen she could see these elements had already gathered around her at birth to help and nourish her on her way to adolescents. This was true about all young volcanoes and as through time these elements change. With those volcanoes who lived before and below Konocti these elements were more radio active and found deep in the ground protected from the air so as not to poison any beings on the earth's surface. The closest to the surface these elements were found were on the lower mountains, the valleys and the deserts where the atmospheric water would erode these areas and expose just enough of them to coincide with the proper energy needed for the beings on the earth's surface. Elements like cobalt, uranium, plutonium, _____ were all element that mostly stayed with the unseen-able volcanoes that lived many millions of years underground before Konocti and were responsible for the refined energy under the earth that related to a profound relationship between Earth and Sky (space).

The upper elements that were associated to the seeable mountains created by the most recent volcanoes were elements like gold, silver, copper, sulfur, arsenic, boron and mercury. Depending on the age of the volcano, the more evident was the type of elements that gathered around them. These were those that reached closest to the surface of the earth and less dangerous to the plants and animals on the earth. In fact these elements in moderations were known to grant great instinct and wisdom to living beings on this surface of oxygen and nitrogen.

And this was the growing instinctual concern for Konocti. This was all of what she know was important in her life. That she was representing all of her ancestors in the movement of these elements to make sure they are distributed naturally and properly according to nature. The knowledge that she was chosen as one of the volcanoes alive during the birth of human kind on earth was such an honor and a responsibility. Konocti was living off what all of those other volcanoes that have lived before her, that they would have given so much to be in her place, yet recognized they have lived and died for the era that Konocti was living in.

The eco of the millions of years of her life really began only 14,000 years ago during an ice age that she will not forget. She recognized it was not easy to honor and teach the humans living around the lake. She could see her place not to judge when they made mistakes and just when she thought she had accomplished it all where she and the humans became one; where it was thought she had created a family, there was more information that traveled by vibration on other parts of the earth from other volcanoes of her time.

Stories about great human battles against one another were different archetypes of people who killed one another over things unimaginable to Konocti: Civilizations in human countries called China, The Middle East, and Greece, the fighting between ideas leading to death in places called the Roman Empire and the Nordic areas of Europe. Konocti know that eventually she would have to meet up with what the other volcanoes around the world called “unfinished business.”

That unfinished business was what has culminated on the other side of the world: Culminating; starting from thousands of years of negativity, Konocti had the idea that this negativity went against the laws of a civilization established many years before the Europeans. This civilization was called Atlantis, where this same part of history was lost for Atlantians over this negativity and all that was needed was to continue the course of beckoning the healing water that waits for that beckoning within the lower firmaments to greet with the upper firmaments by the use of human vibration some called love.

The remnants of Atlantis still exists in form on the Eastern Coast of America where the brave Europeans have traveled to start a new life from Europe to those remnants by ships crossing the Atlantic Ocean to visit the mountain range that was once call Atlantis. Although this mountain range had lost many thousands of feet in the millions of years since its existence, the spirit of youth still remained in its spring waters as well as the natives who have lived around them. These were the stories told about the Altantians of another era of the earth's growth; stories that indicated transitions of change or not to change according to human free will.

It was that changing transition that Konocti was hoping the constitutional Europeans would be more successful at before they reached the shores of Konocti's lake in the early 1800's. The then cry "Go West Young Man (and Woman)" had a much deeper reason then for the search for gold and Konocti was betting on that reason.

The 3000 mile trip from east to west was long for the Constitutional Europeans, yet the journey was noted to be necessary for them to understand what they were about to see. Leaving the Atlantic mountains they then called "the Appalachians" and crossing the northern plains to avoid crossing the wider parts of the Mississippi River, they noticed the subtle effects of the land that was carved by the glaciers thousands of years before then. They noticed the wonderment of what could have been below those glaciers that carved over the plains that were once mountains that were volcanoes many millions of years ago. As they entered into newer but larger mountains called “the Rockies”, they noticed how the vary high parts of these mountains led to very low valleys leading into very fertile land that once was the throat or caldera of the volcanoes so many years ago. As they passed the great Yellowstone Valley they could then see and felt the healing water that could inspire their spirits and repair their bodies to continue their trip to the west coast.

There was one more group of mountains the Constitutional Europeans needed to cross before they could reach the coastal mountains where Konocti awaited their arrival. As they entered the foothill of this group from the long desert valley they could almost hear the warning signs echoing the danger of the radioactive elements from the lower volcanoes that were becoming exposed from thousands of years of winter torrential rains. Konocti know that the Europeans could not withstand the pressure from the radiation like the natives living there so many years. She was confident that these Europeans would follow their hearts to make it over the mineral rich Sierra Mountains to the Central Valley in California that led them to the Coastal Mountains where Konocti lived.

The Constitutional Europeans reached the base of Konocti after days of traveling through the breathtaking vegetation of the Central Valley. The vegetation got even more lush as they got closer to Konocti with the different streams and rivers converged together coming from north and west circling around Konocti on their way to the Bay of All Bays only just a few more miles to go where the next and final stop is the ocean. It became a perfectly logical explanation for the constitutional Europeans to believe that the fertile land of the Central Valley was a result of it once being a large lake many years before their discovery.

It was a good assumption that there at the base of Konocti's mountain; the land gave way to open a channel to merge the large lake in the valley to a so much larger base of water called the ocean. This opening was given as an act of kindness from his mother as Konocti had seen it. It was the opening that separated Konocti and his mother geologically. This separation was needed according to Konocti's mother in order for Konocti to understand the depth of her work as being the last of what humans say is the oldest seeable volcano in what humans say is the New World. This New World has provided the freshness and the innocents and the bravery to change the negativity of the past on the opposite side of the world to positivity in what humans from the old world called the New World.

It was at the base of Konocti's mountain where the sacrifice of mother, giving this deep part of her mountain range that stemmed south from now called the Pinnacle Mountains that gave the awareness to Konocti required to begin her empathy toward the human race long before the arrival of the Constitutional Europeans. It was that that was called 'the rites of passage' and sometimes called 'a parentictamy' in human life for growth beyond puberty.

This parentictamy, at the foot of Konocti's mountain, was then evident to the Constitutional Europeans whose parents separated from their parents to believe in equality and fight for it against their parent's beliefs. These Europeans and the base of Konocti were different from the Europeans from the old world. They were carrying a gene cultivated by the Native Americans on the east coast of America that has been dormant within them since somewhere back during the age of the Greek Empire. Now, on the west coast of America, their meeting with Konocti and the natives living around her waters, the Constitutional Europeans memories continued on the greater path of their spiritual growth.

It was this that was the unfinished business that the Constitutional Europeans realized was plaguing their race for thousands of years. The perentictamy was needed was now needed for their race even though there was still memory that lingered in their hearts that lingered from the times of the Greeks when they heard then too that all men were created equal. They needed to learn over again the steps in how the earth worked and through the verbal and gestures of the Native Americans that there was nothing to worry about their own stability when anything they needed from Konocti was there for them. It was a fact that most all of their race was not agreeable to what they have learned in the recent years since they crossed the Great Divide.

The rivers joined around them and became one in the bypass called “Yolo” where the Sacramento River collected all the tributaries in the Central Valley whose ambitions were to meet up with the ocean by way of the Bay of All Bays. But it was at the base of Konocti could remember what the Native Americans in the Appalachian Mountains on the East coast of America has said about the water that came from the eastern mountains.

The water coming from the direction of Konocti’s volcanic caldera was glowing in the eyes of the Constitutional Europeans. Much different than the water coming from the rivers and streams from the Central Valley that combined rain and snow water runoff mostly coming from the Sierra Mountains. This event was the same as described of the earth generated water from the Iroquois Indians in the eastern mountains in a place once called Atlantis. Except this example was so much larger of an event than what was coming from those springs; this was water coming directly out of the caldera, where the sediment in the caldera was some 4 miles below sea level and where the vents in this sediment are constantly flowing with earth generated, primary, juvenile, highly complex in energy and healing water. This event was so much so energized that the Constitutional Europeans could see it coming and glowing as it came right down the stream coming from the lake as well as directly from the springs coming right out of the ground. They watch this water as it flowed into the Sacramento River still glowing as it mixed with the surface water coming from the Sierra Mountains and into the Bay of all Bays. This was something they thought was happening for many generations and affected in a very positive way; many who have live there.

This, to the Constitutional Europeans, was what was considered the real reason their parents, the poets and the elder Native Americans in the east were showing the way in asking them to go west. This was also what Konocti considered the best way to display how important it was to bring the Native Americans and the White Race together. Representing the two archetypes of people as each race represented one of the two sides of the human brain; the left and right sides, this then became what was called the greatest attempt in bringing all humans together. Because this was staged in the New World which established a constitution that was based on equality it would then be the motivating factor in going beyond what the Roman Empire could not do.

As the surface atmospheric water coming from the runoff from the mountains came together with the water coming from within the earth within Konocti's caldera, this transition gave meaning to all of what the earth's creation was yearning for; 'the redemption of mankind'. With the upper and lower firmaments coming together, the stories given to the races for the sake of peace in the world could be fulfilled. Konoct's greatest goal was thought to be achieved. According to Konocti's ancestors; Konocti was the volcano that possessed the greatest amount of earth generated water coming from the Ring of Fire and because the Ring of Fire was closest to the surface of the earth its water structure was the most complex then other waters. In this case, because there was now establish a universal law of equality among mankind called "a Declaration of Independence" leading to a constitution based on humanitarian rites, Konocti's role was to represent all other volcanoes during Konocti's time in seeable existence at the same time of the existence of the human race.

Konocti, being the last of the oldest seeable volcano by the human eye made it extremely important that she fulfill this mission. But something happened that postponed the fulfillment of that mission in the time the Constitutional Europeans met up with Konocti and the Natives living around Konocti's water. It would take only a small amount of Europeans necessary, thought Konocti, to meet with the Natives living within the area of the water coming out from Konocti's caldera. This group called the Constitutional Europeans were ones who carried a vibration and a chemistry in their DNA most adaptable to living with the natives there at Lake Konocti and any other tributary that had connection to the water coming from the center of the earth though Konocti's caldera. If this meeting was successful, its success would spread as water does when used as a siphon or a way of priming a pump. In this same way; so would it be for humans to change other humans in the world.

In the early years after this meeting, these types of Europeans lived in peace learning the ways of the land from the natives with the fertile land closest to the volcano. The growth of plants and wildlife was considered very bountiful. With farming and hunting then being without economic pressure, service to each other and the natives became a way of life for the Constitutional Europeans. They learned the pleasures of honoring the earth in everything they did and with Konocti's unseen decedents living in the ocean, the channels, through Konocti's caldera, opened to them provided the highest plant protein food in the world called 'blue green algae' which is the first of all called 'food' beginning in the ocean discovered in the world of science today. Konocti's lake was then called "The home of Blue Green Algae" offering those who eat this protein and/or the fish that eat it the most sustainable life in the most peaceful and loving surroundings as a gift to them and their descendents from Konocti and her descendents.

It was the south eastern part of Konocti's lake that was most attractive to the Constitutional Europeans. This was where the most ancient of the tribes lived. This was where other tribes came to collect the wisdom from the elders of this tribe coming from the stories of their elders that lead into the intuition of the elders who had live there dating from the beginning of the first humans who visited and stayed in this same spot back 14,000 years ago. This spot was teaming with hot sulfur springs that were healing to those then as well as it was during their first stay back during the ice age. It was well understood that this was sacred grounds and to some of the Constitutional Europeans; they could feel the vibration of the land and water around the tribe living there.

To the Constitutional Europeans ; those who could feel that vibration, those who had it in their DNA and could remember the reason they traveled the 3000 miles it took to reach this place; they were those who remembered the stories from their parents in their fight for freedom in the New World and were those who could see that the journey of their ancestors beyond the boat ride from Europe to the New World, beyond the dominating powers of Northern Europe, beyond the powers of Rome and even beyond the Greek civilization where there was once mention of the word ‘equality’ just as what was learned by the natives on the east coast of the New World named America.
Copyright 2017 Russell Anderson

This was a place where it was evident to the Constitutional Europeans that they needed much more than the ingenuity of the left side of the brain. This was a place where the wisdom of the tribe living at Konoct’s lake was needed in their hearts. This was a place where the wisdom of the water flowing through Konocti’s veins had taught this tribe for 14,000 years and now in the early 1800s ad the white brothers and sisters had met up with these great American Natives once again, according to Konocti.

But meanwhile, the Constitutional Europeans knew there was another challenge coming from their own race that needed to be settled. It was that unfinished business that plagued their race for many thousands of years of which they knew the rest of their race needed to learn. Even with their lessons of very important steps on how the earth worked through the verbal talking and gestures of the natives around the lake and even though they have learned there is nothing to worry about for their own physical stability when anything they needed came from Konocti; it was still a fact that most all of their race was not in agreement to what they have learned in the recent years.

Because Konocti's lifespan had dealt with millions of years and a human's life was only dealing with less than one hundred years, Konocti could understand how hard it was for the Europeans to adapt to the native thought at the lake whose natural rule was to live their lives for the next 7 generations. Konocti knew that most of the white race that have crossed the great divide like the Constitutional Europeans or have come by ship from Europe where those ready to dominate the land rather than to live with it. She knew most were first generation Europeans who themselves or their parents have not experienced the fight for freedom as was created in the document of "the Declaration of Independence."

Freedom was still new to the white race. But Konocti also knew that the experience of being with the sacred water on the west coast coming to her caldera from within the earth at greater quantity than what her fellow volcanoes on the east coast of America could provide would eventually change the attitude of the white race back to where they were before they weren't violent or insecure. It might take more time than the Constitutional Europeans wanted, but Konocti, with her still three million years of her physical existence, was confident it would be done in her lifetime.

But the Constitutional Europeans didn't quite know that Knoocti knew of the other plan the European race had been following for years with no success. The Ships in the San Francisco harbor 100 miles away were full of unnatural foods. Sugar and spices the natives were not used to to which they knew most Europeans were addicted to, they knew that the white race were bringing alcohol that included toxins that a body new to them would go crazy and even die when exposed to and some who did survive could have even more bodily dysfunctions who eat the sugar and spices. It wasn't the fire water and sugar the constitutional Europeans were worried about, even though they know these things would be the beginning of the end for the natives and Konocti if the Europeans got their way. It was something else the Natives didn't know about that the Constitutional Europeans; something the Constitutional Europeans were told about from their parents that they have dread would never happen again. This something was a secret for a long time and they felt no need to tell their brothers and sisters in the tribe until now....

The secret was summed up in one word.....
“GOLD”

Gold was an addiction the white man used even against themselves; in that, even some would sustain from the toxic food an alcohol to overpower the others who could not, just for the addiction of gold. The constitutional Europeans whose parents told them about this crazy addiction sensed through their ancestry something was wrong and yearned they could do something to change this terrible trend amongst their people. This vulnerability was felt by Konocti as this was where she felt there was a strong enough possibility for change for all Europeans. This was a chance for change when free will can come out of denial.

Even so, there was something even more that needed to be said that Konocti noticed. It was so deep into the DNA of the Europeans; something untold that was unable even to be said by the Constitutional Europeans parents. It was Konocti who could tell the water coming from out of her caldera from deep under ground that gave these Europeans the ability to begin the process of healing and reveal the true reason for their long tradition of being addicted to gold.

Konocti already heard the whispers from her ancestors to the south some 200 years before then. How the Spaniards addiction to gold sent them around the world after they were assured the earth was not flat to explore the best places to find gold. Places like Columbia and Mexico and then California became places they used their efforts to enslave the natives of these countries to dig in the ground to look for gold and if they did not obey they were killed.

The Spaniards were equipped with techniques learned back in times of the Roman Empire where the Romans used the best way they knew to extract the gold from the mountains of Italy and Spain and the Spaniards held onto those techniques despite these techniques being the real reason for the fall of the Roman Empire.

It wasn't to mine gold per say, but to mine another substance that allowed them to find gold with a much higher capacity using this substance in other nations. Many tons of this substance was put on ships from this mine in Spain for the purpose of Spain conquering the world similar to what Rome had in mind being to satisfying their addiction to gold.

These conquering elite from Spain or Conquistadors, they called themselves, knew that even those traveling in these ships would die before reaching their destination because this substance was very toxic. It was known to the Conquistadors to always stay away from this substance and always keep the secret in how deadly this substance was. If a slave or group of slaves found out they could always be pronounced as crazy because that was the side effect of this substance is ;' craziness'; which gave the Conquistadors an excuse to put the slaves to death.

Konocti knew that the secret of this substance would continue to plague mankind if the tradition of this secret was not exposed. She knew that being the last of the oldest seeable volcanoes in America, that there would be a very large vein of this substance below the surface around her within 100 miles of her caldera that has not yet been discovered by the Europeans. This was a natural occurrence in the stage of growth of the earth and with the growth of the volcanoes moving from south to north along this part of the Ring of Fire through millions of years; so did this secret substance. As Konocti's mother died deeper in the ground, so did the pressure of the earth push this substance up closer to the surface of the earth. Konocti knew this substance was not meant to pull out of the ground. That being left just below the surface and not exposed to the sun and the bacteria on the surface would help in the harmony of the earth as well as the wisdom of the people living near it. This would not be the case if this substance was pulled out of the ground as the Europeans in the old world have already been doing for thousands of years. Konocti was bound and determined to teach the white man this one fact so history would not again repeat itself.

Whether this was discussed between the originators of the Constitutional Europeans or not, whether they might have learned from the Spaniards a few hundred years before the Declaration of Independence was signed or not; it was evident that the Europeans at that time began their abandonment of the “All men are created equal” concept they received from the natives on the east coast of America as they continued to enslave those being brought in by ships from Africa. Even though this same substance was not as abundant in the Atlantic Mountains (except in coal in smaller amounts), the inheritance of the Roman and Spanish Empires became part of their DNA well before then and was enough for them to abandon the idea of freedom. Again, Konocti, with her abundant healing waters coming from within the earth on the west coast; she knew that eventually these scars will heal and the ancient stories of East meets West and Able meets up with Cane will finally meet in harmony.

These were thoughts of Konoct's in the early 1800's just before what American history recorded as "The Gold Rush". It was known then to the Lake Tribes and the Constitutional Europeans that this was the part of history where the scales have tipped from the spiritual to the physical. It was then that the famous poem written in Americas Midwest what headline news saying "Go west young man." This was a poem directed towards Northern California, not for reasons of what was in the young mans heart but because it was the time when the tide turned to what was taught to the Europeans for centuries that the way to secure their financial security was though their addiction for gold. It wasn't the fight for freedom anymore; it was the fight for gold.

The years ahead were recorded as great polarization times for the American people. The Civil War of the United States brought a great example of what needed to be formed as a shameful lesson and what not to do to your fellow beings. Despite what was written in the Declaration of Independence and the reason to get away from what their ancestors have done wrong, it was then the fight for individual ownership, land, greed, of more slavery and of Gold. To them, to go to California to become wealthy was to put behind them the polarization they were running from; not knowing it was the same polarization they were creating.

This disappointment spread in both the Tribe around Knocti's lake and especially the Constitutional Europeans who lived with them. The sorrow ran deep in their soles as they saw the work in their lives for freedom fall apart. Freedom was something they thought they could achieve in their lifetime and more than that; they thought that their race had now disappointed the Native Tribes around the lake. They could easily foresee the damage the gold crazed Europeans of their race could damage the friendship they had with this peaceful tribe around the waters of Konicti.

But Konocti lived without judgment knowing time did not exist in her life. The sacrifice the Constitutional Europeans have made for the sake of the love they had for the tribes will never be lost and always be recorded in the growth of human consciousness. She also knew there was more to this story. The core; still latten in this consciousness was locked into the next step giving them the ability to forgive those who have fallen into the insanity of their addiction to gold rather than the peacefulness of living their lives in harmony with the vibration of the earth.

The Native who lived there were costumed in living for the 7 generations ahead of them. They were well versed in living with the pace and the harmony of the earth and their memories were always connected to their ancestors who came to the waters of Konocti 14,000 years ago. Of course it was difficult for them to understand this insanity that began and was cultivated on the other side of the planet to which they lived some 5,000 years ago. But they understand the deep yearning in their hearts that drove them to help restore the relationship of all humanity. The one question they did ask... “What is the cause of this insanity?” not “Who is the cause of this insanity?” If this question could be asked amongst them then they knew it would guide them to an answer.

That answer lied within Konocti. Only Konocti could give both the Constitutional Europeans and the Natives at Konocti that answer. Konocti knew what was below the surface around her. She knew the purpose of every mineral and element for miles below her. She also knew that there would be danger for all of humanity if those elements of purpose were disturbed or used for the wrong purpose and the human species were the only beings on earth that had the ability to disturb what was below Konocti.

But similar to the story of the mother bear and her two cubs: Mother Bear could only watch from a distance as her cubs played in the woods. It was the only way they could learn. If one of the cubs got in trouble in those wood; the Mother bear would only come to their rescue at the last minute to protect them from danger.

This was the natural principle Konocti needed to live by. She also knew that the one substance that most allowed the Europeans to find gold and be addicted to it was just below her surface. She knew that when the Europeans discovered this plentiful substance within the 150 mile radius of her, that would admit many thousands of Europeans who were already addicted to gold at her doorstep. Konocti always wanted the Europeans present around her but not for this reason. The plan was to pull in the Europeans with the spiritual attraction of her waters coming from the magma; not to enhance their greed with the minerals that lie just below her surface.

This substance named “mercury” would be the beginning of the fall of America, just as it was of the Roman Empire and most of all because of the way it put this addiction in the state of denial. This substance named “mercury” continued to remain secrete to all of humanity, just as it was for many years on the other side of the earth.

As this same repeating of history continued from Europe to America, it was so much clearer to recognize this dysfunction in Northern California in the next years. What happened next along the California Coastal Mountains where Konocti was raised up from the earths magma some 3 millions of years ago, will give us all a story that is sure to empower all of us as it leads us out of the 1800’s and into the 1900's with the next big step of change being most necessary in the very years after...

So as we begin with another repeat of history, it is good to know that this level of change has given humanity a new outlook on how precious life is. Even though this gift has been known only by a few, the days during and after the gold rush in America began the spark of a new and better consciousness the world has never seen.....

The Natives at the lake could see the Europeans that visited Konocti where not the same as the Constitutional Europeans. They said they were just passing though on their way beyond the coastal mountains to the mountains on the other side of the Central Valley called the Sierra Mountains where all the gold is being discovered. They were not even the same as the Europeans who mostly came by ship on the coast 100 miles away who set up farms and lumber mills that eventually made slaves of the natives there. The Constitutional Europeans had warned the Elders of the Lake tribe that these people would come and some did, but these Europeans were different from the famers who set up farms on different parts of the fertile land around the lake; their vibrations were far different. It was the stories of the Natives ancestors and brothers and sisters to the south that brought to mind the archetype of these people passing through. It was the story of the Spanish Conquistadors several decades earlier the natives were warned of who were much worse than the farmers the Constitutional Europeans were relating to.

Without words of gestures Konocti could tell the newcomer Europeans would not stop without discovering just below the surface where they stood the substance that would be more destructive for their race than ever before.

Konocti could see that eventually the world would see that this next move or discovery of mercury in the coastal mountains around the last of the seeable volcano in America would be more destructive to all races than all other times in history. If this substance stayed in the ground it would serve its purpose as it relates to the positive part of nature and if it was pulled out of the ground it would relate directly to the negative part of nature. But Konocti could not force this logic on the Europeans or any other race. Her job was to wait for the subtle openings to the human spirit. Without that form of prayer the answers within nature could not reveal itself.

Yet the verdict of free choice was out with the majority of the European people. The next steps would be the same movements that happened in Spain since the time of the Roman Empire. These movements were then going to happen in the middle 1,800's in Northern California. The same high grade and abundant mercury mine in Spain was now going to be discovered in the Coastal Mountains in line with the last of the land seeable movement of volcanoes moving from south to north along the Ring of Fire.

Konocti was what was considered a living volcano described by human thought along the Ring of Fire on the West Coast of America. She was responsible in conveying the true use of this mercury. But at this time this lesson would have to wait. It would then be established that both the volcanic regions in Spain and the volcanic region close to the surface of Konocti; where these two places in the world will be the two major producers of raw mercury for the specific use of finding gold in the world. And with Gold being the one standard used in the European economy for hundreds of years, mercury would now be the one main agenda America now needs to deal with.

To Konocti, because she was 3 millions years of age, she could then say ... soon, the three groups in session at Konocti Lake that day; the Native Americans, the Constitutional Europeans and the Europeans who said they were just passing though, where about to find out that it was dangerous to dig in the ground without knowing the effect of that action to the health of the plants, the animals and all humans in the world. To Konocti, the appropriate word was “soon” but to these three groups at the base of Mount Konocti; the effects of this lesson would take their lifetimes, the lifetimes of their children and of many generations after that meeting.

It didn't take long before the passing through people came back to the coastal mountains where Konocti and her ancestors once existed to find the millions of tons of mercury close enough to the surface of the earth without surfacing. The range of this phenomena began from south of San Francisco Bay and extended through the north and ended at the shores of Lake Konocti. It was this space along the coastal mountains that became the second most producer of mercury in the world when decided to mine and extract. Little was said about this discovery when it remained secrete to those extracting gold so as to keep it known to a few inline of competition to just a few.

What would have been to develop the growth of human consciousness if this substance remained only to be seen in past history at this point? This substance was then contributing to the world of industry and beginning another round of mental illness that Konocti had warned was called the real western world called America.

The Gold Rush was proclaimed to be centralized in the Sierra Mountains in Northern California. It became an industry when horse and buggies filled with mercury took the 150 to 200 mile trip from the Northern California Coastal Mountains to the Northern California Mountains. By heating the mercury to a liquid it would easily find the gold so it could be extracted from the soil and the rocks in those mountains.

After finding the gold, most of the mercury was left in the mountains and discarded waiting for the rains to collect it and wash it down to the valleys and rivers not knowing it was a preservative and latterly haunt the next generations.

This same action was a repeat from the Roman Times. It was a prayer of Konocti's that the human race would have learned back then but even the slaves the Romans sent to the mines and even with the people dying in the mercury mines in Spain and what was known of the tragedies to the people who took the long ship rides from Spain to Columbia and Mexico during the Spanish Inquisition with mercury in their hulls; was not enough for this race to learn. The same was with Northern California in the 1800's, it was always fed into whatever media they had in those times; that the problem would be another substance or chemical and because of the direct connection to gold (the main relationship to the economy for the Europeans) those connections to mercury were widely chosen to stay in denial about. The theories in the Roman times were about lead, arsenic or even alcohol; substances you could see even after they turned into a gas, except with mercury this was not true. It was only known to the wisest of mankind that it would be mercury that was responsible for the true fall of the Roman Empire.

For Konocti, she was still praying that those whose ambitions were to find the gold in Northern California would come to their senses. This would end the exploitation and the disturbing of the soil around her and her ancestors burial grounds. This would set up a natural setting of land and magmatic water coming from within the earth that would combine with the true purpose of mercury. This would mean, for Konocti, that it would be more beneficial for the Europeans to make peace between the Native around Konocti's land, water and even the mercury then to continuing once again this same repeat of history.

There is a natural reasoning that bacteria and virus has a purpose on the surface of the earth. When we die bacteria takes over the body so as to brake down the high nutrient body of flesh, blood and bones so as to be equal to the nutrient content of all the earth. We become nitrogen of a form of fertilizer for other beings to live beyond us or our bodies. So in this same example this is matched by the earth in the form of volcanoes.

When the surface of the earth needs more nitrogen and oxygen what is within the earth responds to supply the surface more of what keeps us alive. This is what we call air. Bacteria and viruses also take part in keeping our children's immune system alive, as a child as well during the child's lifetime. It is a strong baby who is able to crawl on the earth's surface. Knowing this is important because if the bacterium is too strong and does not become equal to the surface of the earth the message to the body is that it is dying.

But this is different with mercury. When mixed with bacteria on the earth's surface it becomes an invisible gas that affects all cells in any physical body. Mercury, under the warmth of the earth's surface, becomes the only metal that attracts itself. It is the only metal that attacks the milt and sheath (sp); the protective organ between the blood system and the nerve system. It is the one substance that interacts with other toxins leading them through the blood system, up the spine in the nerve system and to the brain and to the pineal gland, the gland that determines the will to live.

In the 1800's the discussion to mine the mercury just below the surface of the earth within this 150 mile circumference began the gradual shift of great wisdom from the healing water within the earth and the mercury staying below the surface, bound again to the next repeat of history in braking down the wisdom as shown in what has happened to the human DNA since the beginning of mining mercury for 5,000 years on a world wide bases.

The Gold Rush in the 1800's went as planed according to the Europeans who had passed through Lake Konocti the day the Natives and the Constitutional Europeans worked to talk them out of the addiction to gold. The many years later; large cities were built, immigrants from all over the world with destination San Francisco docked in this port to spread out into the Gold Country in the Sierra Mountains with the help of what they thought was their good friend; "Mercury".

This same thought on the West Coast of America was considered a relief of what was happening on the East Coast. The slaughter of thousands of men in a Civil War was unbearable and no one on the West Coast would ever believe there was a common thread in what was happening on the East Coast. The subtle part of the 5,000 years of mining mercury in the European ancestry continued to affect the DNA of both the North and South on the Eastern part of America called the Civil War. The result was deep polarization in and argument over slavery when both sides were relying on what their mercurial ancestors have done for thousands of years rather than to connect to the wisdom of equality for all given from their Native American brothers and sisters on the east coast.

This was accented by the treatment of the Natives. The white race decision to exile the natives to the plains as an example of rejecting the wisdom of the Natives. The Natives on the east coast were relying on the spring water from the Atlantian Mountains for their greatest wisdom: to be pushed from that source would give way to a great sense of confusion for the Europeans as well as a great anger and resentment from the majority of the Native Americans. If there was another enemy that could be identified by the European Americans and the Native Americans; it would have made it clear that all of the exiles and the killings in the Civil War would have made no logic at all.

It was a man with humble sources named Abraham Lincoln that had gathered the eastern part of the country together enough to begin the revealing of that source and who the enemy actually was. But this man was shot down soon after he has established some ground on this subject when the resistance was too strong when there was so much focus on the physical and little on the spiritual.

This is what Konocti had noticed in determining the restoration of the Europeans. In order to calm the mind of the European who's mind worked almost always on the left or analytical side of the brain; there was more complex, youthful or newly generated water needed in order to recognize their right side of the brain. The springs on the east coast were sufficient for that growth, especially at the time of great oppression for the founding Europeans in coming to America. These were those who asked and needed the change. But in the 1800's much more desperate measures were needed for the healing waters to make that change from left to right side on the brain and back to the center where both sides of the brain is honored.

The prayer and hope for Konocti was when the Europeans came west; they would notice the need for the more abundant earth generated water rather than only the atmospheric water. This would allow them to make that change more readily. This in turn would echo that change to the rest of the country; a country that had the ability to change the world. The true "Go West Young Man" saying in the 1800's could have been meant for that reason. Because Konocti and her ancestors were located at the earth's Ring of Fire, they were closer to that more youthful, healing magmatic water from the lower mantle of the earth. This also would mean the domineering European mind would change from left to right and the Native Americans would be able to discover the true purpose for the European visit.

The changes were needed for both civilizations in creating a true civilized world.

Yet, that was not what had happened in the 1800's: The gold standard remained the same as what was with the Spaniards and the Romans of years back, the mercury mines in Northern California were unveiled and Konocti had to go to Plan B.

Plan B may have been discouraging to much of the Tribe as well as the Constitutional Europeans but not to their Elders and certainly not to Konocti. Konocti could see through many of human generations as well as her ancestors that this was only a bump in the road and the advancement of all nature is stored in the memory of its water. Some of the understanding that water will always obey to human nature can be lost for many human years but the lessons humans learn from the negative will always lead to the positive in a much higher level when it has always been known that humans were created as compassionate beings. Nothing, regardless of what is seen on this planet, could take away from this accomplishment.

The news of a greater industrial revolution had reach the tribes at the lake and as the Constitutional Europeans began to dye off they were being replaced by farmers intrigued by the fertility of the land around Konocti. There also began the growing of the need to supply the revolution to what was also needed according to the engineers of the revolution stationed in San Francisco. The great wisdom of the tribes began it spiral downward the more this industry was introduced and when mining began on their very sacred land for sulfur and boron the tribal elders began to see that there was something they have overlooked in the white man as it was different from the memory and the friendship of Constitutional Europeans. This was one the Elders have missed dearly in their hearts yet has faded away from life at the lake.

There was another discovery on this mine at the sacred land near Konocti Lake. This was the mercury that spread close to the surface in the 150 mile radius of the death of Konocti's mother. It was the largest victory at Konocti for the European miners because now they could work directly with the businessmen in San Francisco who worked directly with the gold miners in the Sierra Mountains. The word sent from those mountains was that mercury brought up the production of gold more then 90%. It wasn't long until wagon trains filled with mercury ore coming from the sacred mine at Konocti made the trip 200 miles away to a town called Nevada City California where loads of dirt and crushed rock was mixed with the mercury to find the gold.

The Konocti Mercury Mine then became an open pit located only feet away from the lake where mercury tailing were pushed into the lake as well as the springs from magmatic water that were disturbed by the mining and was mixed with the mercury that seeped into the lake from erosion and every time it rained. This was never considered a danger to those at the lake at the time; not until the scientific studies and the discovery of the words “Bio Accumulation” several years later.

Despite not knowing, this bio accumulation was going on at the bank of Konocti’s lake and Konocti was very sad about this transaction knowing the people living around her lake, then and in the future, were not ready for this transaction. This transaction came down to two major elements coming together. Each one of them took many; even millions of years to develop yet in the stage they were in would be the most destruction to mankind as they accumulated through time. The first was bacteria and the second was mercury. As things live and dye they eventually turn into bacteria so they can then turn into equal nitrogen to the earth. Before things dye they are organic substances while living. Lake Konocti was the home of the first living substance in a land baring or freshwater lake. This substance was called “blue green algae”; the first or oldest food substance on earth. Blue green algae began its existence in the ocean but traveled to Lake Konocti through undergrounds vents with the help of Konocti's children whose births began in the ocean. This created a scenario for Konocti's lake to be even more organic than when she was born, with the help of her decedents.

As the lake filled with sediment consisting of dirt, rock and lava from previous eruptions; the lake also contained the yearly growing high in nutrient Blue Green Algae. Thousands of years of this algae growth living and dying gave Konocti Lake a very high level of organic matter as well as bacteria. This bacteria was natural all living being around this lake could withstand this level of bacteria. In fact; as in all bacteria it helped the growth of these beings immune systems much like the babies need to crawl on the ground to get strong ; except when this bacteria was mixed with mercury.

When bacteria separates from its origin (organic matter) and when mercury separates from its origin (sulfur) and when these two elements come together, the process of Bio Accumulation begins. This comes in a form of an invisible gas called Methyl Mercury. Methyl Mercury is first detected visibly in fish when they are the closest to what man sees as being living beings and these living beings are closest to and exposed to the combination of bacteria and mercury coming together in their living space called Sediment. Small microcosms and crustaceans living in the sediment become food for the smaller fish and with methyl mercury in the sediment mercury begins its journey up the food chain from the small fish being eaten by the large fish with the large fish having many times more methyl mercury contamination than the small fish.

Konocti felt this effect like a growing skin disease on her surface. She could see that she would be the first of all the volcanoes in the New World that had such a disease. With her very strong magmatic soil and her extra organic sediment from thousand of years blue green algae growth in her 4 miles of sediment; regardless of her youthful, healing water coming directly from the magma of the earth feeding into such pure sediment; for the first time Konocti could feel that her skin was being attacked by a parasite. Now, instead of the positive growth of everything being natural in and around Konocti; there is a chance that this was many more times unnatural than what the other mines could do within the 150 mile circumference from the surfacing of elemental mercury. Konocti was much more organic than her ancestor volcanoes in this area. With Konocti's sediment and lake still be exposed and with her connection to the ocean and blue green algae, meant; to add mercury to such an organic lake would mean Konocti's sediment and water would become a double negative through time rather than a steady positive for all life around her.

Growth to the positive would only depend on human free will. The series of tragedies in the East would then be followed in Western America. Slavery, the Native exile and the Civil War was to be learned what not to do rather than what came natural. The thyme “Go west young man” was taken from spiritual freedom over to human greed and addiction and the chemistry of that greed and addiction was to be changed by human free will; not by corresponding with nature as Konocti was praying for. The next decades would need to be a series of lessons progressing to higher consciousness by going through the physical to get to the spiritual rather than living in harmony such as the example that Konocti has given to the natives and the lake beginning 14,000 years ago.

More mercury mines were dug along the side of Konocti Mountain leading down into the Yolo bypass and the Central Valley. Where these mines were built; small towns became bigger ones. San Francisco Bay became more populated as ships came from all over the world to join in on the gold rush. The disorder of those who worked directly in the gold and mercury mines began its dysfunctions in other contingencies that backed them up. Anger between those who thought they owned the gold led more into a more violent age as access to the mercury led to mental illness.

With more access to money came other chemicals to more enhance mental illness and violence. Buildings were built in the name of bars and pubs to make room for prostitution and other ways to stay in denial about what was actually the problem. There was no one to explain how bio accumulation worked and what was more important to know was; there were few or none who wanted to know. Despite the insanity at the mines, hundreds of businesses were created in the name of an economy based on what was called 'the gold standard' thousands of years before then and reestablished during the Constantine Era in Europe some 300 years after the great Master Christ.

Of course, the Europeans in California could have talked to Konocti or the natives around Konocti but the language could not be understood in the manner needed without the process of human time. It wasn't till the 1960's when a scientist could explain bio accumulation in the cerebral way where the Europeans could understand. Konocti knew the explanation also needed a leader in America to back that explanation up in order to reach the other cerebral minded people in the country. With the addiction to gold so strong still in the 1800's, that would have to wait.

As the population grew in the middle of the late 1800's the need for housing and agriculture production made way to ways of controlling the water in the Central Valley. The natives earlier were nomadic where they would plant in the summer and when it rained they would move to the foothills in the winter. The Europeans could not tell they were going against nature when they designed and built levies and canals to direct the flood waters originally meant to recharge the ground water every year but channeled that water directly into the ocean by way of the Yolo Bypass and the San Francisco Bay. This allowed them to build in these areas and to farm all year round. It wasn't seen that primary water mixed with atmospheric water made the land rich with organic soil for many years to come. "Water is water" they would say, but the Natives knew of a simple vibration of the land and water. It was not told of what the Natives thought of the white man in this regard.

Along the ring of fire that leads west of Konocti and into the ocean is a range of land that begins the growth of the Red Wood Trees of the world. This range of growth then moves north parallel to the Ring of Fire as it continues its journey north. Within miles of the ring of fire where the ocean meets the land exist the largest and only place in the world that can be found of these groves of redwood trees. Konocti knows it to be the trees growth on land that tells her how important the work of her descendants truly is. Just as the new earth generated water coming from within the volcanoes offer more oxygen to the sea water, the gathering of larger fish capable to feed off of the volcanoes and the reaction to the water offering fog to the area that nourishes these large and ancient trees called “The Redwoods.” When the European ships came in to San Francisco for the gold rush they also saw the other gold in producing lumber from these monsters of trees. Not knowing these trees would serve a bigger purpose then cutting them down; the lumberjacks coming to California could only consider this act was what their forefathers did and this was the right thing to do. Their DNA had not been changed.

On the western side of Konocti beyond the Central Valley lay a dense forest along the foothills of the Sierra Mountains. This too was considered sacred aria for the Native Americans before the Europeans striped the trees down to make lumber and for cattle and sheep to graze. As the little towns grew bigger, talk in these towns every year was continuing questions on how long the drought would last and when will our wells run dry. These people only lived some 100 miles from the largest recorded trees, similar to the Redwood trees, called the Sequoia Trees. These trees did not depend on water from the surface but only from water deep underground below the mantle. It was considered that in that time if more machines were able to reach these trees in rigid terrain, the Sequoia trees would have been called extinct.

It was a wonder why the Europeans could not see the importance of the environment by most of the Natives in the Valley and the Mountains along the Sierras. These lessons ignored by the Europeans would get stronger as time went along and as the industrial age continued under the gold standard, the thought that the technologies would be the answer for the Europeans and there would come the day when the Europeans and the Native Americans would live in peace from all of the new inventions they have created. As this type of economy grew, poor countries like China and Mexico sent people to California to help with building the levies and agriculture. In thought, these people were not slaves as they were paid small wages to help with this growth. This would be different then what went wrong on the east coast of America and what they thought was the cause of the Civil War.

The canalling of the water to the ocean to build buildings and farm all year round obvious created more gradual desert land in the Central Valley. This logic obset the native in the west as the Europeans hear, thinking the Natives were still considered savages to them when the Natives were convinced the Europeans were still mercury poisoned by the Gold Rush. It wasn't till the Europeans own kind began to stand up against the European thought. A man called John Muir who settled for years where Konocti's mother was berried in the coastal mountains east of San Francisco Bay along the Ring of Fire , stood up against the way industry was set up against the Europeans. Muir took many trips to the Sierra Mountains to visit the Sequoia's and the Yosemite region created from the younger visible volcano called Mammoth and the ice age. He gained favor with US President Teddy Roosevelt to get Yosemite named a national park but Roosevelt fell short of his promise with Muir when he failed to convinced the industrial world not to build the Hatch Hatchie Dam in that Park. This incident broke Muir's heart and ended up in tragedy for Muir despite the information coming from Norway of a Nobel Lorient named had found a formula and discovered ways to find water below the mantel of the earth in the late 1800's. This, of course, would be what Muir was praying for but this information was not transferred over to Roosevelt or those who could lobby for water control had won over the US government. This very message to the public of America would not only mean that building any dams are not necessary in the world but truly, world peace might even be achieved just by knowing where water originates from. Because all economy is dependent on water or everything can not exist without water then the true economic wealth is about water, not gold.

One hundred years ago from the time this book is being written the three most famous people in the world were; Thomas Edison, Henry Ford and a botanist called Luther Burbank. Burbank was famous for grafting different breeds of plants together by using vibration; which meant he could talk to plants. The three men spent quality time together. Camp outs and social meetings they would attend together at times. More than just engineers, inventors and businessmen were interested in these three meetings. The three of them together set up in a town called Santa Rosa California in 1920. Some of the world's greatest artists, spiritualists, Christians, Hindu's, Buddhists, etc. and even common people were hoping and praying this trinity would come together in unity. The technologies already created at the time had already been used for the wrong purpose, they would say and their proof was World War 1, despite the political reasons given those years.

The town of Santa Rosa California was filled that day. That day Burbank showed his friends; Thomas and Henry the farm of plants that they could feel the vibration on what Luther called the most fertile land in the world. This statement was true in the case he was relating to but Burbank was a botanist, he learned little geology at that time. He knew little about Konocti and where the land or soil came from.

Santa Rosa was as small town in 1920 that sat at the base of Mount Konocti that would be much more visible some 200,000 years ago when the last eruption blasted off much of Konocti's top of her mountain. Before that blast the only outlet for the primary or magmatic water to flow coming from Konocti's caldera was flowing west to a river called now the Russian River. This meant that since Konocti was born, until some 200,000 years ago the most complex water and soil in the world was coming off the western side of the mountain and into a large basin called Santa Rosa. From there, the Russian River continues into the ocean.

After that eruption, this same type of water and sediment went east into the Yolo Bypass from Konocti's underground springs connected to her caldera and a creek coming from Konocti's lake called Cache Creek. From the Bypass this water and sediment flowed into the San Francisco Bay by way of the great Sacramento River. Luther Burbank was correct about Santa Rosa. Santa Rosa became a direct example of how the earth was alive and this was also being said through one of her greatest fans; Luther Burbank.

But that day where this trinity; Burbank, Edison and Ford came together, came and went without a word about nature, earth or Konocti. The "War to End All Wars" as they said, went on with millions of people dying. Edison and Ford went on to allow their technologies to be used even more destructively than the Civil War or any gunfight at any mine in the Western States. They have released the main technologies responsible for the highest evolved pollutants in the world from that time forward until the time of these writings.

Yet, this would not mean that Edison and Ford intentionally knew the potential of the pollution they have created and released in their future. Yes, of course, it can be blamed on business. Even then, in 1920, it was a long standing belief of most everyone who follows what money can buy that the idea the reason Edison and Ford left Santa Rosa that day without coming back was because those who were financing them would not agree that what Luther Burbank had to offer would make money. But the artists and the philosophers in the world would not agree to that statement. The technologies that reflect nature, art and water would be much more abundant in the world of finance than coal and oil burning pollutions spreading throughout the world. It would then have to be more than money or gold that would be the reason for the suppression of the true technologies that show how the earth works. These techniques would mean universal wealth; meaning an answer to and for equality or no slavery at all, in any circumstances. It would not be about money or who had the gold then: It would be that there was a fear from those who now possessed the gold that they would lose their authority over what they thought were their slaves.

The examples of great people like John Muir and Luther Burbank have shown the world there is a way to disconnect from the addiction of greed, even when the times they have lived in were in so much turmoil that most in the world would have to choose the security of physical survival.

The principle of going through the physical to get to the spirit of it all was needed at the time so as pioneers like Muir and Burbank can cut through the very deceptive corruptions for the sake of love for life and all who live in life. In the case of seeing that it really wasn't really the gold but the fear of losing authority over others that created the corruption in the society around them. But then, what was it in the physical world that allowed people to be possessed with this fear? Was there really a substance on earth that became the physical charge of electricity so as to distort the spirituality of mankind?

With the inventions of Edison and Ford it became required to use an enormous amount of coal and oil with the smallest amounts of particles being released in the atmosphere. Those particles are laced with even smaller particles of mercury. Energy and travel has always been the most desired products after food in America and the world since the industrial revolution. These combinations created a disorder in mankind's spiritual efforts enough to continue, on a much larger level, the same control in many years of history especially in the cerebral countries in the world.

The one substance of mercury is one that Konocti has warned about but could be good or bad and that there was another substance connected to other substances that needed even more attention but that attention would be imposable without first neutralizing the problem with mercury. Without doing so, the work of John Muir and Luther Burbank would not be able to show how important the technologies of inventors like Nicola Tesla, Victor Shalenberger and others needed to come to the table for the sake of humanity. These same types of people continued to be persecuted by the fearful owners of gold by forcing them into poverty or even death before the public could ever know they stood for earth friendly technologies, not ones that would eventually make their children sick.

This age quickly became the age of "the Mad Scientist." The mercury made it self defeating to become a scientist unless the scientists followed the direction of science based on war. The more the scientists were part of groups that accepted their anger on other groups the more they were able to make destructive instruments that brought the wage of war to a higher level. This action brought any mercury in the body faster and directly to the brain where its last part of the journey was the pineal gland where it would separate the body from the spirit. At this point the spirit lost any empathy towards him or her self or anyone around them. World War 1 did not end as was said; it only became more complicated with the continuation of greed from not salving the problem with mercury. Mankind found more mad scientists to continue the war and just changed the name to World War 11. It might only need a more clear reason for the name by calling it World War 1 with bigger and much more dangerous bombs.

This led us to the other part of the story: This part was more mysterious but somehow not kept secret for thousand of years as the story of mercury was. Maybe it was because it was obvious to man it was something they should always stay away from. It was before Konocti was born and what she was born on that was part of that story. Because Konocti was the last of the seeable volcanoes it became clear the reason Konocti had warned that these other substances be known to mankind and take precaution before they begin exposing them to the surface of the earth. But then too; this was the age of the ‘mad scientists’ remember.

There are layers of the earth that are uninhabitable to any being that can breathe but was what was needed in order for Konocti to be born. The Constitutional Europeans has come across some of what Konocti has been born with on their tripe from the east coast to the west coast just before the met at Konocti's lake and the Natives there. It was where the much of the land had washed away in the deepest valleys in the desert. They could feel right away there was something wrong as they made their decision to stay away and continue the trip.

It was the radio active material that no one has found use for at that time just after the US Civil War. Not until now (1925-1945) after WW1 and during WW11. More suppression of the human spirit led to more anger leading o complications of the human mind becoming more politically polarized giving more misuse of power that then related directly to science ; and this was where the mad scientist come in.

It was now officially the beginning of the Nuclear Age where who's ever thought to be the smartest has the power to settle the difference between their neighbor by using the power of the earth. As the left side of the brain in more analytical and connected to the ego it is damaged less by the mercury coming up the spine. It will then override the right or intuitive side of the brain and when it reaches the pineal gland in the brain the brain can analyze some very disturbing agendas. The example of Edison and Ford became well known as logical that the world could admire what they have done, yet the example failed to mention the pollution created from their inventions have disrupted the human brains of the next generations.

But now with it being the Nuclear Age there in another can of worms that needs to be dealt with. It wasn't just the Adolf Hitler was leading the Mad Scientist so that the suppressed German people could get their revenge; there were many businessmen and bankers behind this illogical logic that allowed this destruction to happen.

Silently, the forces against this logic had appeared in the mist of this continual destruction in the world. While WW11 continued; the messages came though to the public little by little to advance the human spirit. Not enough to stop the atom bomb being dropped on Japan in 1945 to end the war yet killed thousands of people, but enough to begin another surge of awareness that any advancement of violence to any being is not advancement at all. This had ringed true to the testimonies of both Einstein and Oppenheimer who were scientist who worked on the concepts of the bomb and regretted it.

Then what could be done to really stop these wars? Was there another way other then to fight fire with fire? Why would it be suggested that Konocti, the last of the oldest seeable volcanoes, be a better way to find that answer? To understand this question we might continue to look a little more into history and the hero's we decided to put in our history books.

It wasn't until the 1960's the word "bio-accumulation" appeared in our history books with a scientist named Rachael Carson. Carson exposed chemicals and pesticides as being detrimental to the food industry. Her book "Silent Spring" became famous among what was called a small movement of people concerned about the environment. This started the other side of industry explaining the pesticides the farmers put on their crops were slowly killing the people that eat the produce. Carson called this "Bio-accumulation." Similar to the connection to Teddy Roosevelt and John Muir, the truth behind "Silent Spring" reached the John Kennedy during his Presidency. Kennedy assembled a team of scientist to study Carson's work and during that investigation of this study Kennedy was shot.

In Carson's studies she traveled all over America showing how the industry of chemicals on plants brought devastating effects on the delicate ecosystems around the country. When she reached Konocti she found her work on bio-accumulation was best displayed as the land, the sediment and the water showed very high organic nutrients, more than other places. At Konocti (now called Clear Lake) Carson noticed the DDT that was being sprayed into the lake mixed with the high level of organic nutrients that quickly turned into bacteria which started the beginning of the process of bio-accumulation lasting for many years. Carson did not mention in her research the mercury mine on the Indian reservation on the far eastern part of the lake that was hidden to most of the public for many years. It would be later found that when the mercury turned into a gas the DDT would multiply that gas to a higher level in such a fertile area with layer upon layer of blue green algae in its sediment for thousands of years.

Of course, the Kennedy assassination was always of focus of many controversies and it would be foolish to assume that the Carson discoveries the main reason over such political wildfire into play. Environment was never an issue in most any discussion in the early '60s. But one thing for sure is what Rachel Carson explained about bio accumulation has been happening for thousands of years and what bio accumulation does to the human brain. It was only assumptions in those thousands of years but Carson brought those assumptions to science. This science; the President of the United States wanted to find out and if proven true it would be released to the public, but the chemical industry was a large and vast industry that was in great fear that their control over that industry and the people would be lost.

Another thing for sure are in the phrases we all carry around us; “you’ve got to be out of your mind” and “mad as a hatter” certainly applies to people like Harvey Oswald or Jack Ruby or even those who were standing on the grassy knoll. Because there was insecurity in their lives of a political, ideological or economical nature; that insecurity promoted a physical chemistry in the brain where that chemistry created a disregard to all human life, including them. Rachel Carson brought to head that that chemistry in their bodies made them sick but also made them crazy. And also, through bio accumulation, allow that madness into their next generations.

Rachel Carson died of cancer only a few years after President Kennedy, dying of something she was trying to prevent to happen to others. There was so little headway in stopping the corporations that continue to poison our food, land, water and air. There has never been a group able to stand up against this massive industry in showing the exact science of bio-accumulation and there has never been a government that could match the support towards the environment as what was thought John Kennedy could do.

To those who sensed or knew of all the tragedies done to the earth and the people, it probable looked that this would be the end, but Konocit still would not give up.

With all the pollution at the lake she knew the people there would suffer dyer consequences. She knew how the mercury, the dying blue green algae and now the DDT would effect those around the lake, but the water coming from below the mountain and below the lake coming from her caldera at a much larger pace was Konociti's new hope in redeeming those at the lake and the world. She had to hurry now because she knew the mad scientists would advance in their surface studies bringing more chemical laced with mercury to the Central Valley to a much higher level. Those Chemicals and mercury had only two other places to go; to the San Francisco Bay and the Pacific Ocean.

Konociti could not help but to believe the Central Valley have been ok if the Europeans now farming there would have continued what she and her ancestors had taught the Native Americans many generations ago that the Central Valley stayed a flood plain with both atmospheric water coming from the sky and magmatic water coming from within Koniciti and her ancestors south of her. There would be no need for chemicals in the Central Valley if all plants there where healthy enough to resist insects or diseases with access of these types of water. Also there would be no need for dams when all water would be stored in the aquifers as it has for millions of years. This being the extension of the most fertile land in the world, as Luther Burbank had mentioned, it would have stood up as the greatest example of agriculture and how plants immune systems worked. DDT and other chemicals, of which Rachel Carson had worked so hard to stop, would not exist and John Muir's heart would not have been broken if the vibration of plants would have been recognized to the public.

Konocti picked up on this emergency that was part of human yearning. Her focus now was on the San Francisco Bay, her water and the Baby Boomers of the 1960's. The Summer of Love in 1967 had come out of great unrest in America, Europe and the Middle East. It was clear the youth then did not want to do what their parents wanted them to do. Very similar to when the Constitutional Europeans separated from their parents (the Europeans) because they didn't want to fight for more product; they only wanted freedom. For American youth riots broke out all over the country against the Vietnam War. It was obvious another perentectamy was needed to resist the world of industry for them to get back to their roots.

Why would it be so hard to understand that the reason for this change is a change in the water structure that would coincide with the will for change in the desire for truth? There was no other place to go in the world that could compare with the intensity of that change then the place called San Francisco Bay in California USA. Again, “Go West Young Man” was the chant for anyone who wanted deep change at that time in their lives and this time it was directed directly toward the spirit not the hunger for security. San Francisco was put on the map as the “Capital for Change” and with this it was now hopeful that Konocti could finally get humanity to see that it was all because humanity was loved by an all loving, all knowing force we first call Nature. The youth in the 60’s have taken the steps to find this out despite the fears they have been taught by there parents and the generations before them.

Konocti was there to help nature, the universe or God into these youths lives through the ware coming out of her caldera, from there the sky would be the limit. The echo of this message would go everywhere. The relationship between man and earth would then grow though the understanding of water where it wasn’t about an ‘us against them’ religion, dogma or insecurity; it would then be a place where all could see the similarities in all so all could honor all differences. San Francisco was only a place where we could begin again to except those differences for the sake of change.

Two years latter that change hit the east coast of America. The Mountains of the Atlonians who were honored by the spring water coming from their deep magmatic water at a place called Woodstock, New York. What the Beatles put together in the record album called "Dr. Peppers Lonely Hearts Club Band" in '67, with Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young put together the song "Woodstock" singing; "We are stardust, we are golden, we are billion year old carbon and we got to get ourselves to the garden," in '69. All of this was happening at a very crucial time during the assassinations of more of our greatest of leaders. Martin Luther King, Bobby Kennedy and so many when haven't been able to put in our history books from the high level of public focus on material or industrial needs only.

It has finally come to this spot, for Konocti: With this change there will never be a forgotten moment from the beauty of the art, the music and vibration our children will play forever. The ability to honor the earth and the universe without having to exploit them will now reach all shores in the world. Konocti was happy of such an accomplishment. But of course there was one other warning she needed to send over to mankind in dew time, and that was "Bio-accumulation". The polluted water still collected from many years past was becoming stronger, even secretly, if the generation of the '60s could not find a way to neutralize those toxins in their lifetime. Konocti saw this happening in her lake and now the central Valley and it was then in the late '60s heading for the banks of the San Francisco Bay; “The Change Capital of the World.”

The formula to make this happen was to bring left and right together. This formula was one that Konocti knew very well. This same formula of all the great masters of the world going way back to the stories of the true meaning for all religions before they changed into “us against them societies”. This true story was about the restoration to bring Cane and Able back together as true brothers. This was now happening in the early 1970’s at the Bay of All Bays with the help of the water coming from Konocti’s and her ancestors calderas. The computer age was transferred through open thought of the right brain thinkers. Some called these thinkers “hippies.”

Hippies were easily judged. Many gave way to drugs which was something said to help them brake the ice in entering into the care free attitude they tried to achieve, but the serious logic of truth allowed them to step into a zone as being humble in admitting their faults and listening to the impulse of their hearts. Aside from the out of the box way they dress similar to their much looked upon as mentors called “beatniks” from the east coast in the 1950’s, they gained the authority on the west coast as being clear about their empathy to all despite their faults. This was the transition needed to set up the very important responsibility to safeguard a technology that is extremely dedicated in communication to all fellow beings.

As this technology moved forward its leaders took on their new label as being “Yuppies.” In the transition of hippies turning into yuppies many of the yuppies forgot their roots as being a hippy. There was not a thought to the majority of the yuppies that there might be a deeper reason in their discovery of the yes and no or the bits and bytes equation.

Konocti was not discouraged by many of the yuppies abandoning their hippy roots. She knew that eventually this consciousness would change the more she pumped magmatic water into the Bay. The leaders in this consciousness were beginning to come out of the woodwork. A man called “Steve Jobs was one of them. He was responsible for creating the strongest technology capable to communicate to the rest of the world. Yet, Jobs still struggled with technical part continuing to separate from the art or the reason the technology was created. Going through the actions in the times of being a businessman, he remembered the things that got him there and with the things that went wrong he could make things go better.

Steve Job’s connection to the spiritual and the importance in bringing Eastern and Western philosophy together with his technology was what he thought was his main purpose before he dyed of cancer. This, he thought would salve any of any personal as well as business problem he had and would help others throughout the world with the technology he had created. The road he started on while in the '60's as he listened to the Beatles music and tracked their destinations had fascinated him and just before he dyed would confess that so much of the digital parts of what he had created were wrong. His vision was that his technology was so much more then the X's and O's or Yes and No's or Bits and Bytes he had worked with for years. In fact, he thought, there was another dimension he had hoped to get out to the people. It was the other dimension that related to a vibration that was not in the common digital technologies he had built his business on.

Konocti could see what Jobs was trying to say. She was prying that he could see what it was about in that other dimension he could describe in physical terms. "There must be something in the water" to Konocti, was a good clue she was working on for Steve Jobs to convey, but it was not in the cards yet for humanity to step into that zone. This other dimension or third entity as in water was the extra H in H<sub>2</sub>O; the one H that is incalculable in the time of science until now and to be exact the better way to describe it is "love."

In a graduation speech to the students at Berkley University in California, just before his death

Steve Jobs handed out a book from one of his mentors explaining eastern philosophy and what led him to the conclusion that duality was an illusion; that there was equality between male and female or oxygen and hydrogen or even the opposite of the logic of what he taught for many years; bits and Bytes.

This was the real reality that explained why the hippies and the yuppies needed to come together. All of energy depends on that extra h in h<sub>2</sub>O to be noted and come together and that would be the new adventure in the world of quantum physics or what some people call the 4th and 5th dimensions.

Again, Konocti was not disappointed that this achievement was not accomplished in the 70's or the 80's. Though the yuppies had no idea they were slowly being poisoned by the pollutions coming from the mines from the costal mountains and the pesticides from the Central Valley Konocti continued to heal what she could with her magmatic, primary water while they came to their senses. Most of them had settled in Marin County but when production of the product they continued to invent required land to build building with large square footage there was a large move south of Marin to the San Jose area they soon called Silicone Valley. To Konocti, the technologies inside the earth were replicated at Silicone Valley and the vibrational water inside Konocti was the only natural way to heal Silicone Valley. But at that time there was something else the Valley needed to worry about if they knew what it was. The business they were in did not allow them to see the subtle changes they were going through.

Konocti felt that all of the actions that were inside of her that all anyone would need to do was to ask her and those actions would then be released to the surface of the earth. This part of asking would need a specific intelligent thought for that energy to turn into action. That specific thought did not come from the humans and Konocti's ancestor and the global volcanic contingency throughout the world could not react. The only thing Konocti could do was to keep sending the water and minerals within her now dying caldera as fast as she could.

Yet, out this suppression; the healing technologies from other parts of the world were at that point of specifically asking. From that suppression the survivors began their emerging to the surface. In the 1990's there came scientist and inventors who could explain in specific manner; what was inside Konocti. To expose this information would empower the oneness in everyone. However truthful this statement be true it would only be considered a silly statement if the over all belief was that duality was not an illusion.

The extra H in H<sub>2</sub>O can neutralize any toxin on the surface of the earth. This was what some inventors would say and this would bring out other inventors and scientists that most all the public have not been informed about. The '90's would be the years that most who searched would find to know.

In order to truly understand the inventors of the '90's we would do best to back 100 years ago to the times of a man called Nicola Tesla. Tesla was much more advanced then the corporate part of industry could understand. Thomas Edison probably had no choice but to steal his work and shelve it when all of the banking systems who used the power of the gold standard convinced Edison that he could not work together with Tesla because they (the bankers) were not smart enough to know that free energy would be much more lucrative then their wildest dreams could dream. The Edison and Ford phenomenon continued to convince the public that it was natural that they should pollute the air, water and land with pollutants they didn't know of or cared about. It was not until the 90's that people had enough of all that and began to reach out to those who had learned from the earth and had technologies that would reverse all of that that had gone wrong in the years of polluting industry promoted by the insecure bankers in the world.

Dr. Yell Brown, like Tesla from the mountainous parts in Europe, could see that true science was not what was on the surface of the earth but what was inside the earth we all needed to be aware of. Tesla's technologies could pick up on the energy within vibrationally without having to dig holes in the ground to extract minerals to make energy. Brown went even beyond the thought of just the earth by saying everything was made of water and thus even the Sun and the ether in space was water. Though not seeable in space, it was transferred into what we see as water at the poles of the earth (and every planet) where water travels below the earth's mantle and is released into the atmosphere through its volcanoes. Brown made a big stink in the 90's by pouring water into his machine and it came out in the form of a gas that admitted a flame with a heat equal to the surface of the sun.

Brown, who spent years in the Russian Gulag prisons, whose dream was to go to America to use his technology to neutralize nuclear waste called his science "a stoichiometric mixture between hydrogen and oxygen." Similar to what Steve Jobs was looking to achieve between bits and bytes; Yell Brown showed when there was a state of equality between hydrogen and oxygen; there was pure energy. This would then explain that all of what are perceived as dualities; hydrogen/oxygen or male/female or internal/external or bits/bytes and so on were one or the same. This too would describe the family structure through male and female: At the time of orgasm there is no difference between him and her; only love... the vibrational part of H<sub>2</sub>O... pure energy that can never be lost. Of course unless we decide to believe we are not equal ... the illusion. This is what Konocti had taught the Natives at Konocti Lake beginning some 14,000 years ago. Anyone could see in this case when the Europeans come around only some 250 years ago why the Native American looked upon the white man as being crazy.

All of this, of course was so much better than what the gold standard had to offer. Ecology and economy coming together through the principle of water would leave no one out of the equation. The relationship between mankind and Konocti grew as great thinkers like Dr. Brown reflect on the depths of the earth. This reflection was much more than what other inventors and scientists who only could educate themselves on what is on the surface of the earth; Brown went below the earth in a different way of thinking called "vertical studies." This study already showed how the earth loved humanity and how it was able to heal itself and who or what was on the surface. This stoichiometric mixture between hydrogen and oxygen he discovered was what he called the "Real Black Hole." Instead of explosion, it imploded. No need to travel into outer space to find the Black Hole.

Dr. Yell Brown finally got his day in front of the US Department of Energy in 1996. He showed how he could neutralize nuclear waste using all types of radio active material. In that meeting the DOE was certainly impressed but in only a few days he received his letter from the government saying “we would like to help you with your research but at this time it would hurt the economy. Brown was broken hearted but he also knew that he came from a history of other inventors who were broken hearted. The gold standard logic was unspoken in this case but would be... “Dr. Brown, we do not want to neutralize nuclear waste because we build bombs with it.”

Dr. Brown dyed a year later in 1997 from a massive heart attack. While many of his followers would say Browns death was suspicious, others would say “we met the enemy and it was ourselves.” The world seemed not to be ready for a great man like Dr. Brown. The movie “Chain Reaction” made in 96 was information made from Brown himself. Even the inventor in the movie looked like Dr. Brown who was killed in the movie because they could not expose free energy to the world. It would hurt the economy.

There have been many who have followed the principles Dr. Brown had followed since 1997 and some have advanced even in higher levels, but none have been able to prove it beyond the government. The important thing inventors have found since then is the empowerment of the people. Nothing will happen without bringing hope to the people and it is that unity that will produce action in the things that is most important to mankind. In all of the year's inventors of earth friendly technologies, they have struggled to get their projects funded from lack of human consciousness. Consciousness needed to grow so as to recognize that all life comes from within.

The greatest example of this consciousness is the service Konocti has shown to give to the public as this same example is shown from the inventors and scientists. If the inventors and scientists fall pray in thinking this knowledge only came from them as was the case of Edison and Ford, this process would be proven as without consciousness and it would need to start over and many of the eastern thought explaining the lows of karma have been written. Consciousness can not be achieved without free will and if there is any substance controlling the human brain free will can not achieve consciousness. This is why Konocti has worked so hard to neutralize the mercury in the San Francisco Bay with the magmatic primary water coming from within her caldera.

Konocti helped the set up of Silicon Valley so that the world could communicate the connection between Nature and humanity. If the mercury continues to bio-accumulate year by year then all of what Silicone Valley was created for would be lost and could then not be able to address the same problem elsewhere in the world. These same findings have also been related to the radio active material that lived below Konocti. Even more dangerous than mercury; these metals will be even more harmful if the human cerebral mind continues to expose them to the surface without neutralizing them as Konocti and her ancestors have done for millions of years. But without first salvaging the mercury problem that continues to pledge even the minds of the scientists and the inventors; that would be considered a form of insanity or going against the laws of karma. The greatest advantage in this case, Konocti thought, was that the radioactive material has only been exposed to mankind for 100 years now. The mercury has been exposed to the brains of humanity for thousands of years. The one ally Konocti had in this was the Natives Americans who had centuries of years in their lineage of not being exposed to mercury.

In the year 2005 a scientist called Dr. Masaru Emoto came from Japan to Konocti's lake to study the water structure there. Emoto was famous for freezing the water crystal to show the difference in water throughout the world. He sold many books showing the response to the smallest of water crystals and the consciousness of man. When people were around the water crystal the crystal would respond either positively or negatively according to the personality of the people or person. When Emoto froze the crystal at Lake Konocti he noticed the complexity of the water was beyond what he noticed in other lakes or body of waters in the world. When told the water came from the magma below the lake he had to admit that he never stopped to think that was possible because most scientists believed water only came from the atmosphere. In putting the dots together he began to recognize that complexity of water meant that the water was more youthful and that it had more energy and that would mean that it was newly generated, not because it was old.

Emoto was also studying Brown's gas and the works of Dr. Yell Brown at the time. The astonishing comparison of what Brown's Gas could do and the example of the water coming out from the magma at Konocti had come to mind enough to begin his research in putting the dots together. Emoto noticed that despite the pollutant particles in the Konocti water it still held its complexity. Brown and Emoto were scientists that in their lifetime could truly understand the need for vertical studies and honored other scientists who continued pushing against the norm.

Emoto died suddenly in 2014 with what a friend reporting at his bedside Emoto saying; “They got to me.” Whether this was another of one of those conspiracy theories or not, Konocti could tell when people begin to dye or do not have enough support around them to care to live. All too often scientists live like secret agent men or women not knowing who will sabotage their work. But Konocti knew that there was not death for those who are conscious. The grief that people have for not being able to accomplish what they started in this body will always be accomplished in another.

There is much to be written in the development of the earth through Konocti’s eyes. One thing for sure is that if you ever ask her she most certainly will answer your questions. To Konocti, the environment we are all living in is dependent on the questions you ask. Like the ancient proverbs mention “where two or more are gathered”; it has take many thousands of years to know that energy is created when male and female unite. The closest one near us is Mother Nature. Konocti’s job has always been to help us understand how important it was to connect to Mother to understand the Father. To go through the physical to recognize we are all spiritual beings.

So, where do we stand right now at this time in 2017 or whenever you might read this meager statement of human relationship to Konocti or the last of the seeable volcanoes in a country called America? The two major ambitious unfinished businesses needed at this time, according to Konocti and the scientists working on vertical studies, are:

1. The more positive of the two is... to answer the question in where actually water comes from is the most important issue because it answers the question of how powerful the human spirit really is. Despite what is thought that the earth is over populated, studies show how water is the cause of all economies and to empower the public that pure healing water is first generated within the earth, even though mans consciousness is not caught up with the understanding, would be the number one way to stop all wars. With the abundance of this non polluted water growth would be everywhere and there would be no reason to fight for in the world of industry. Our way of living would change for the best, we would learn service for one another and Nature would be honored rather the exploited.
2. The more negative of the two is ... We need to recognize what is actually controlling us? Today more then ever and even at a time when we are even more sophisticated, we are people who are depressed or a better way of explaining it

“we are mentally ill”. We can not respond to the earth when we are diagnosed as being mentally ill. In recent studies at the University of Calgary in Canada was shown that mercury was the only metal that attacked the myelin sheath in the human nervous system, making it the most dangerous substance that was not radioactive in the world. In this study, it was only mercury that would lead the other metals or toxins to the pineal gland in the brain and this was when mankind became completely unable to find his or her spirit. When the scientists took away the mercury in the test no damage on the myelin sheath would occur despite that for thousands of years we thought that Lead, aluminum, arsenic or any other toxin was causing Autism, Alzheimer’s, Parkinson’s, ALS disease, MS or any other neurological disease. Solving the problem of mental illness is our major focus and to expose where it comes from is first so we can go on in dignity for the reason or the purpose we have for our next generations.
